Mr. Malott says that with these thirty-five additional engines the Vandalia will be in shape to handle promptly all traffic offered. Last winter, with the large traffic, there was a shortage of motive power, the trouble being made more acute by so many engines being disabled by the hardness of the water following insufficient rainfall. Some congestion also arose from shortage of track facilities. This was partly remedied at great expense during the winter, and since that time the work has been pushed to completion, and yards and tracks are now adequate to any probable demand that will be made on them.

his examination of the Prudential Life In-

MARY'S PRINCE.

It was a very rainy day, and Mary did not know what to do with herself. All at once she had an idea. She sat down to draw a wonderful Prince she had dreamed of. Now, Mary really had great faith in dreams coming true, and after she had drawn the Prince and held him up to the light he nimbly stepped down out of the picture. Where is the Prince?
